

CHAPTER
The Star Unicorns

Recorded as a transmission in progress.

Greetings brother/sister/father/mother/daughter/son.

Those in communication: Star Unicorn of Love and Star Unicorn of Power

Date: The second time period since creation of the axis of transformation*
(* Reference to A Cosmic Love Story, Chapter 6.)

Subject of Communication: Connection/Unity

Purpose of Communication: Illumination

Introduction: We are Star Unicorns. We translate our greeting to each other as brother/sister/father/mother/daughter/son because in our language the greeting is an acknowledgment of kinship in a common genetic heritage that we intend to pass on at ever higher levels of expression.

The Past: As Star Unicorns, we leap from star system to star system carrying the transformative power of evolution. Evolution is our mission, which we view as our service to our divine source. Our God sent us into the universe to find where energy flows had stabilized and become self aware enough to make a leap in consciousness. Our task is to understand the history of those energy flows, assess the level of transformation which can take place while maintaining the genetic coding in those flows, and provide the energy for those flows to make the transformation.

In performing our mission, we understand and embrace that we, too, evolve. The more we explore and understand, the more we grow in wisdom, strength, and gentleness. These particular qualities are those we value most highly.

In our cosmology, wisdom brings peace — when we are wise enough to move the energy to a new level without destroying the genetic heritage peace comes to the heritage, the new world created is harmonious within itself, and the joy of accomplishment radiates from the new world into all the dimensions. Through our work, we feed the energy of transformation to those realms that cannot digest the energy of disharmony and thrive on the energy of peace.

Strength is power expressed through understanding and brings change. When we are strong enough to go through the process of understanding energy expressions of a frequency very different from our own, strong enough to allow that understanding to express itself through our transformative powers, and strong enough to hold the pattern while the transition takes place, then we truly achieve change.

Gentleness expresses our wisdom and power through unconditional love. By applying the wisdom of our understanding and the strength of our powers with infinite tenderness and just the right amount of force, we achieve our transformative purpose.

We are evolving beings. We have not always achieved our goals. When our understandings were insufficient, we attempted to transform without all the pieces in place and the transformation failed. When our strength was too little or too great, we began the transformative process only to see destruction as the result, either through collapse of the energy system or expansion of the energy system beyond its capacity to maintain its integrity. When our love was conditional, such as through over-identification, we would project our own vision of the results of the transformation and create an energy field that could only be held when one of us remained behind. (May the day of transformation come when we will all be reunited.)

We come to new star systems in waves, each with their own joyful task to perform.

First come the keepers of the knowledge. While each of us has the entire history of our journey encoded, the keepers of the knowledge have that history at a conscious level. They are essentially vast data banks of all our experiences to date. In the new star system, they locate the the species we are to work with in bringing about the transformation and establish passive links. The information received is compared in exquisite detail with all the information we have about other systems where we have both succeeded and failed. A first model of the transformation is completed to be passed on to the next wave. The next wave are the keepers of the energy. While we all have the transformative power, the keepers of the energy constantly focus on expressions of the energy, refining those expressions into ever more discrete forms in order to provide the greatest possible selection of tools for the transformation itself.

The next wave are the keepers of the vision. We all seek to achieve our purpose in unfolding the universe and the cosmos. We all hold in our hearts the day of our return to our home and reuniting with all of our family. (What tales we will have to tell!) The keepers of the vision have as their central practice keeping their focus on the worlds of the moment.

All those arriving at a new system know that in the past we have made the mistake of being too anxious to complete our job and go home because the call is so strong and the joy waiting so great. Our impatience was very costly to us.

The record keepers faced the risk of losing their compassion as the data banks grew so immense. Understanding a new system can seem a trivial task. Where an incomplete understanding produced failure, one of the record keepers remained behind to hold the genetic memory until the time of restoration, shown to us at the time of the first failure.

The keepers of the energy faced the risk of becoming impatient because they have the power of instant transformation. Where too little power was used and the transformation headed toward implosion, one of the keepers of the energy remained behind to keep the genetic system alive in stasis. Where too much power was used and the transformation headed toward explosion, an energy keeper remained behind to hold the energy field in place until the restoration.

The keepers of the vision have made the mistake of imposing a vision, rather than letting the vision emerge gracefully and organically. When the vision does not fit and a transformation takes place that is not essence, a vision keeper remains behind to hold open the door of evolution along the new path, until the restoration of the initial path arrives.

 In the midst of this transmission, we received a new understanding. ***
We bless the universe for the transformative message just received. Until now we did not know that there was a Star Unicorn of Restoration. We assumed the vision we were shown of our mistakes being corrected required the presence of a force unknown to us. We understand that part of the reason for our failures was the unconscious nature of our perception of the restoration; believing the restorative force came from the unknown, we feared that force would judge us for those failures and destroy us. Now we know that the restoration is brought by another in our family, we understand that we are freed from that fear, that there were no mistakes, only learnings, and that our kin left behind when we did not succeed are being freed to join us here for what may be the final transformation.

We see the potential for final transformation because we have discovered in your Earth a doorway that appears to lead directly back to our home world. We know that this planet provides ample energy to form illusions. We have been lured by illusions in the past. And we know that the energy previously expressed in the fear of punishment is now ours to use in holding open a doorway to our home world. Once our task here is finished successfully, we will make our journey into that doorway. We ask your prayers that we find our way home.

Subsequent to this transmission, the unicorns completed their part in establishing the axis of transformation, passed through the portal, and returned to their home world.
